Shanghai Zoo Part 2!! Here we have the wolf, Hogeo-kun.
It looks like he's just a head, but he actually does have a body, too.
Princess Tenko is ghastly pale, too. This is Princess Hogeo. Oh, I guess he's a prince. I made him a girl. Sorry, Hogeo. —Ai Morinaga

Honorifics Explained

In this manga book, you will find Japanese honorifics left intact in the translations. For those not familiar with how the Japanese use honorifics and, more important, how they differ from American honorifics, we present this brief overview.

Politeness has always been a critical facet of Japanese culture. Ever since the feudal era, when Japan was a highly stratified society, use of honorifics—which can be defined as polite speech that indicates relationship or status—has played an essential role in the Japanese language. When addressing someone in Japanese, an honorific usually takes the form of a suffix attached to one's name (example: "Asuna-san"), is used as a title at the end of one's name, or appears in place of the name itself (example: "Negi-sensei," or simply "Sensei!").

Honorifics can be expressions of respect or endearment. In the context of manga and anime, honorifics give insight into the nature of the relationship between characters. Many English translations leave out these important honorifics and therefore distort the feel of the original Japanese. Because Japanese honorifics contain nuances that English honorifics lack, it is our policy not to translate them. Here, instead, is a guide to some of the honorifics you may encounter in our manga.

-san: This is the most common honorific and is equivalent to Mr., Miss, Ms., Mrs. It is the all-purpose honorific and can be used in any situation where politeness is required.

-sama: This is one level higher than "-san" and is used to confer great respect.

-dono: This comes from the word "tono," which means "lord." It is an even higher level than "-sama" and confers utmost respect.

-kun: This suffix is used at the end of boys' names to express familiarity or endearment. It is also sometimes used by men among friends, or when addressing someone younger or of a lower station.

-chan: This is used to express endearment, mostly toward girls. It is also used for little boys, pets, and even among lovers. It gives a sense of childish cuteness.

Bozu: This is an informal way to refer to a boy, similar to the English terms "kid" and "squirt."

Sempai/Senpai: This title suggests that the addressee is one's senior in a group or organization. It is most often used in a school setting, where underclassmen refer to their upperclassmen as "sempai." It can also be used in the workplace, such as when a newer employee addresses an employee who has seniority in the company.

Kohai: This is the opposite of "sempai" and is used toward underclassmen in school or newcomers in the workplace. It connotes that the addressee is of a lower station.

Sensei: Literally meaning "one who has come before," this title is used for teachers, doctors, or masters of any profession or art.

-[blank]: This is usually forgotten in these lists, but it is perhaps the most significant difference between Japanese and English. The lack of honorific means that the speaker has permission to address the person in a very intimate way. Usually, only family, spouses, or very close friends have this kind of permission. Known as yobisute, it can be gratifying when someone who has earned the intimacy starts to call one by one's name without an honorific. But when that intimacy hasn't been earned, it can be very insulting.

Chapter 25: Out of Love

Salt

Sensei, are we there yet?
We won't make it in time to play.
Was Shizuoka always this far away?
Seriously, these days you should at least rent a car with GPS.
"Heh.
Leave everything to me!"
We have no need for such vulgar gewgaws!
Look forward, forward, forward!

Are you okay, Izumi?
Oh, pardon me, pardon me.
We couldn't just lock Seimei up in a pet carrier for such a long time, poor thing.
I knew we should have taken the shinkansen...
Now, Wacky!
WHAP
But Takashi is the one taking care of him!
Aww! But pets are a part of the family.
Then leave him at home!

ENCHANTED...
うとり…
Just a minute. What are you doing to my Seimei...
S-Sensei! Look Forward! Forward!
What are you doing!?
You're in the wrong lane! Wrong lane!

Hey! What are you people doing!? You nearly got us all killed!!
Oww...

Aaaaahhhh!?
You again!? What are you doing here!?
I should be asking you!!
We have an away game in Shizuoka.
What about you? Why are you everywhere we go...?
Shizuoka?
What are you talking about? We're in Aichi Prefecture.

Eeeeeehhh!?
Sensei! Hey! We passed Shizuoka!
That's strange. We should have been driving through Shimizu until just a little while ago.
Then we make a U-turn! Get in, everyone!
I'm done with this. Everyone, unload your bags!
We'll get another car.
We won't make it in time for the match.
We're cancelling for today!
We'll have some misokatsu in Nagoya and go home.
PERK
Nagoya, huh? Some chicken wings would be nice, too.
And unagi!
Tenmusu, tenmusu!
Ebi-fry ♡

Heh heh heh.
I was watching a TV special on Nagoya Cockin, and it gave me the biggest craving for chicken wings.
It's the pick-up bus for our company's holiday resort.
Y... yes.
This car yours?
STARE
Sensei, you drive the other car.
Yay!
Okay, fine! I'll take you. Get on!

*Actually, Ôta the Younger used to be fat, and Hana was head over heels for his stomach. (See Volume 2)

Since they have animals with them, it will be hard for them to find a hotel now.
Brother, if they'd like, why not let them stay at the resort?
You're a good man.
Mm-hm.
Unlike your brother...
No, not at all.
I thought I told you he's not "Stomach Pillow"!!
I can finally sleep. Zzzzzz.
Come on, I'm almost done.
I thought I told you this isn't a toy.

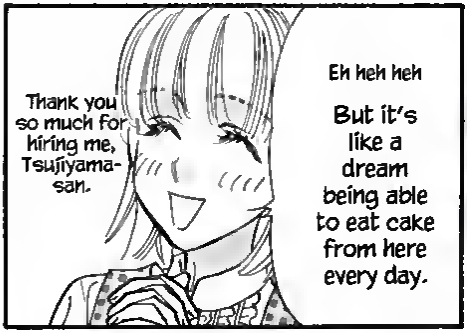
Hey, guys.
Kyaaa!
Club is cancelled for today.

Um, Hana-chan.
Well, I had my eye on it yesterday, but they sold out just before closing.

Please let there be a chocolate pistachio left today, please let there be...



Eh heh heh
But it's like a dream being able to eat cake from here every day.
Thank you so much for hiring me, Tsujiyama-san.

I just couldn't stand to watch anymore, I guess.
Every single day. I couldn't calm down myself.
Eh?

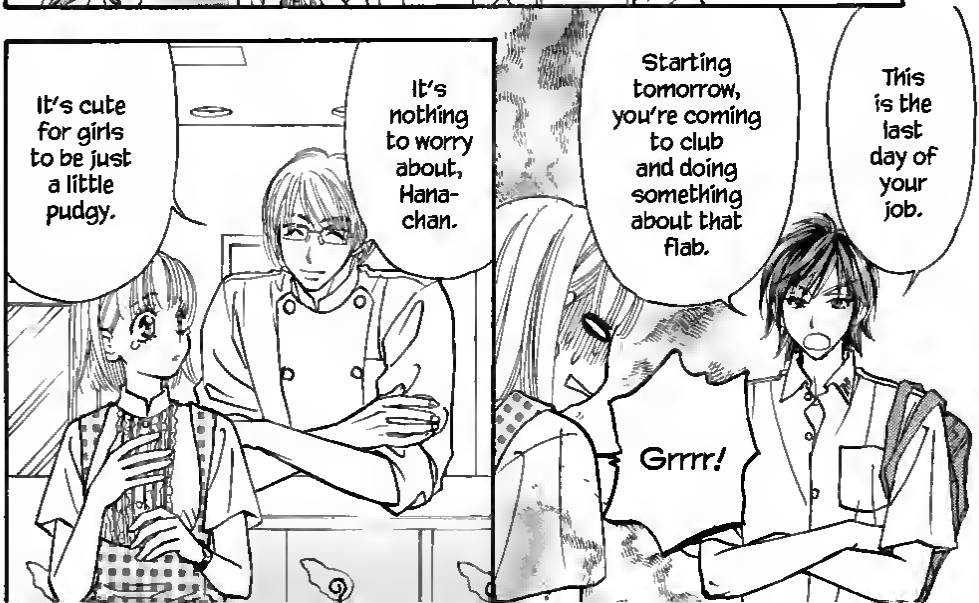
I'll take all the cake you have left, please.
What!?

HMPH
So that is how it is.
For the present, you are forbidden to eat cake.

You can't! He promised that I can have whatever cake is left!
You just can't!

Izumi-sempai.
It's just too yummy!
Y-you're mean!
How much do you eat every day? In just a week, your face has gotten so fat it looks like it'll burst!



It's cute for girls to be just a little pudgy.
It's nothing to worry about, Hana-chan.
Starting tomorrow, you're coming to club and doing something about that flab.
This is the last day of your job.
Grrrr!

Right?
Tsujiyama-san...!
That's right. You're very cute.
Eh heh heh heh.
E-eh heh. I guess so.

Izumi-sempai, I'm not quitting my job.
If you came here to cause problems, then please go home!
Then we'll work, too.

Wha?
Starting tomorrow, we're working here, too!
"We"...?
Me, too?

We've gained experience points this past year at the inn and the farm!
That's true...
I can make tea!
It's not that we can't. It's that we don't.
Normally, there's no need.
J... just a minute! What are you thinking? You can't do anything!
Got it, guys!?
And so, for the present, the hockey club will be the pastry shop club!
Oohh, we have a part-time job.
I knew it.
Hey, Izumi...
It's okay. It's for club, so we don't need pay!
I can't pay more employees, and, um, I might have more workers than customers.
Um, but it's a small shop, so I have enough help already...
I get all the leftover cake, okay!?
Yaaaaaay! Launching the pastry shop club!
That's right. I'm counting on you.

Why do you only ever get in my way?
I can't take it anymore.
Why do I have to deal with you being mad at me, Izumi-sempai?

It's none of your business where I work or who I spend time with, Izumi-sempai.
Please, just leave me alone.

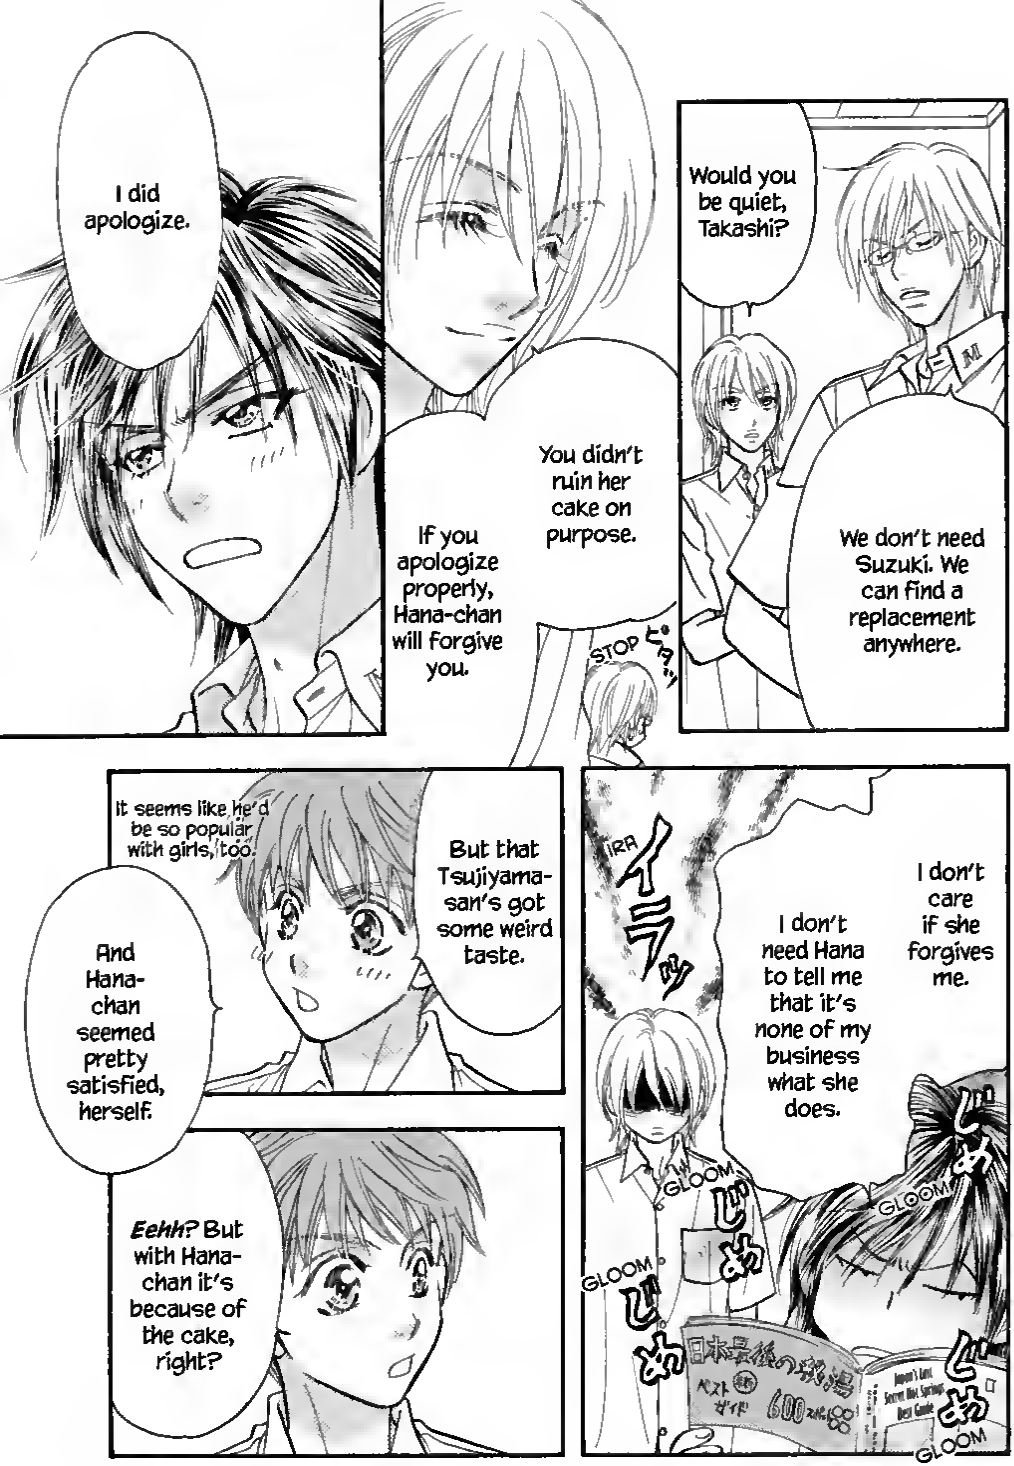
It's no use. Without Hana-chan, we can't even play six-on-six games.
We haven't been to an away game in a while. Let's go.
Come on, Izumi, forget about Suzuki.
Yeah.
It was pretty fun, too.



I did apologize.
If you apologize properly, Hana-chan will forgive you.
You didn't ruin her cake on purpose.
STOP
Would you be quiet, Takashi?
We don't need Suzuki. We can find a replacement anywhere.
I don't care if she forgives me.
I don't need Hana to tell me that it's none of my business what she does.

But that Tsujiyama-san's got some weird taste.
It seems like he'd be so popular with girls, too.
And Hana-chan seemed pretty satisfied, herself.
Eehh? But with Hana-chan it's because of the cake, right?

Whatever the reason, it looks like Hana-chan really likes Tsujiyama-san.

And if we're not there, they'll be alone a lot.
Who knows? They could get really attached.
Come on, Natsuki.
Oh, but...

Oooohhh--
Well, yeah, they have lots of good food.
Like foie gras and truffles and wine...

But why France?
Tsujiyama-san asked me if I'd go there with him.
When he opens his own shop there.

He was, he was!!
What? Of course not.
I did think that for a second, though.
And we were interrupted.
Eeeehh!? What's that!?
So he was confessing his love to you!?
Huh...?
Really, you're so dense.
You wouldn't say that to a girl you don't like.
You wouldn't!
Like?
I don't know...
I think he's a nice person, but...
So? What will you do? Do you like Tsujiyama-san, Hana?

To think our Hana, who only had interest in eating and sleeping...
That settles it.
At last...
Does your heart start pounding when you see Tsujiyama-san?
It does, it does.

The sponge cake wouldn't rise very well.
What were you making?
Sembei?
Yes, well...

Did you beat the eggs?
Did you warm it to body temperature with a water bath?
N-no, we'll do it ourselves!
Doesn't cost anything.
You should listen to what you can.
And you're wasting ingredients.
Erk...
Aaahh, I can't keep my eyes open.
It's just not possible. We'll never bake better than Tsujiyama-san.

I have one minute.
There's no hope for the ends right now; what's important are the means.
Hey, Natsuki.

Huh? Tsujiyama-san.
Eh? What is Izumi-sempai doing?
It's okay, it's okay.
Eh!? Hey, I'll be late!!
Yes, that's right.
Shhh!
Don't mix it too much.

Yes, very good.

He's been working hard since last night.
So he says he'll make a cake for you himself.
He ruined the prototype cake the other day, right?
Oh, it kinda looks good.
This time, it will turn out.

Making a cake?
Izumi-sempai is?

Izumi-sempai...
If he feels bad, he should just apologize and get you to forgive him.
But as usual, he has to keep up that front.

If he doesn't get your forgiveness fast, he'll waste all the resources, too.

Whaaa? But...
And apparently he was really dejected when you told him that it's none of his business and to leave you alone.
It'll be fine.
Please let it turn out this time.
...well, all right then.

From now on, I'll have a little bit more of an open mind and let the narrow-minded Izumi-sempai off the hook.

The End

Translation Notes

Japanese is a tricky language for most Westerners, and translation is often more art than science. For your edification and reading pleasure, here are notes on some of the places where we could have gone in a different direction with our translation of the work, or where a Japanese cultural reference is used.

Shizuoka, page 5

Shizuoka is the capital of Shizuoka Prefecture, a prefecture in central Japan, not far from Tokyo.

The shinkansen is the bullet train.

Aichi Prefecture, page 10

Another prefecture in Japan, on the other side of Shizuoka from Tokyo.

Misokatsu, unagi, tenmusu, and ebi-fry page 11

All of these are local dishes of Nagoya, the capital city of Aichi Prefecture. Misokatsu, or miso cutlets, consists of pork cutlets with a red miso sauce. Unagi, or eel, is big in Aichi, and has been cooked into a wide variety of dishes. Tenmusu, short for tempura musubi, is a rice ball with shrimp tempura, and ebi-fry is fried shrimp.

Nagoya Cochin, page 12
A special breed of chicken found in Nagoya, and used in making Nagoya's many famous chicken dishes.

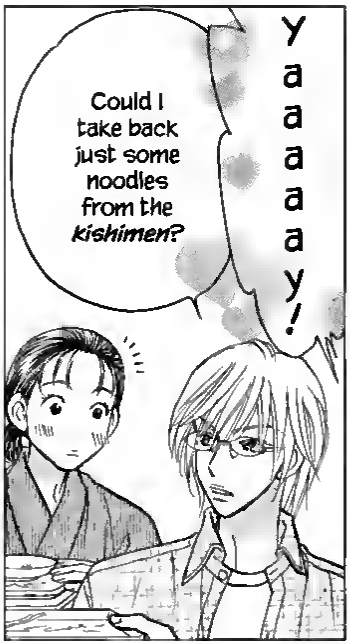
The noodle specialty of Nagoya, kishimen is a flat, brown noodle often served with miso.



Kaeru manjû, page 37
Kaeru means frog, so a kaeru manjû is a steamed yeast bun shaped like a frog. It's a type of sweet you can buy in Nagoya.

Happiness fat, page 41
In Japan, this is what they call it when a man gains weight after getting married. The idea is that the man is happily eating his new wife's delicious food so much that he gets fat.

Moé, page 66
Moé is a phrase used by fanboys and fangirls to describe the type of character from an anime or video game that they have a particular attraction to, and the strong feelings that those characters inspire.

Water bath, page 108

A water bath, or yuŝen in Japanese, is a way to cook something by putting a container holding the ingredients in warm or boiling water. Water baths are used to cook things that need careful temperature regulation, like chocolate and eggs, because the water serves as a buffer to prevent the ingredients from getting too hot too quickly.

Sembei, page 110

Sembei are Japanese rice crackers, known for being flat, quite the opposite of spongecake.

Takashi x Izumi, page 127

The line is said by a character from an earlier volume, who's obsessed with a genre of manga called yaoi. It's kind of like slash fiction in the U.S.—stories of homosexual relationships between male characters written for the enjoyment of a female readership. Just as writers of slash fiction denote the characters that are the subject of the relationship using a "slash" between their names—Kirk/Spock, Frodo/Sam—yaoi fans sometimes use an "x" for the same purpose, as in "Takashi x Izumi." This character is enjoying the idea of Izumi and the baker or Izumi and Takashi having a relationship.

Seiken chûdan gyakuzuki and osu, page 128

Seiken means "correct fist," and is a normal fist with the thumb outside the rest of the fingers. Chûdan means "middle level," and refers to a strike to the middle level, or the body/torso, and gyakuzuki is a "reverse strike." So the instructor is telling his students to do a reverse punch at body level using a seiken fist. Osu, in this case, means "yes, sir!"

Jôdan, page 131

Referencing Mahiru's attack on Sôta, Mahiru's grandfather is impressed with her jôdan kick. Jôdan means "higher level," and in karate refers to a strike to the head.

Chocolate monaka, page 140

A monaka is a wafer cake with filling. In this case, he's buying a chocolate monaka, which is kind of like an ice cream sandwich. In the center is a layer of chocolate, surrounded by ice cream, all contained in a waffle-like wafer.

Matsuri, page 144
A matsuri is a Japanese festival. There are food, games, and entertainment, like a fair, only without rides. Everyone dresses up in Japanese-style clothing.

Yukata, page 145
A yukata is a summer kimono, made of cotton and less formal than a normal kimono. Like a kimono, a yukata is tied with a belt called an obi, which, for girls, is wide and tied in a special, decorative way, and is a little more restrictive than the obi men wear. Girls like to show off how they look in yukata when they go to a matsuri.

Jinbei, page 145
Jinbei is informal summer clothing for men, consisting of a short coat and pants that go to the knees.

Geta, page 153
Geta is a type of Japanese shoe worn with yukata, kind of like flip-flops, only made of wood and standing on two wooden slats called "teeth." Since Mahiru is prone to kicking boys, they would certainly want to avoid her when she's wearing such potentially painful footwear.

Takoyaki and goldfish scoop, page 153
Both are musts for summer matsuri. Takoyaki is fried octopus, formed in balls and put on a skewer. The goldfish scoop is a game where you catch goldfish with paper nets.

Fried squid.

Princess Tenko, author's note
Princess Tenko is a famous Japanese magician and illusionist, and even she would be shocked and amazed at Hogeo-kun's ability to look like just a head.
